DAY NINE - THE MANIFESTATION OF DESIRE (JOSHUA)

The fun and interesting thing about physical reality is the ability to dream of something and then have it come into your life. In the nonphysical realm, it's quite easy to manifest anything. Of course, it's not nearly as much fun as when you do it here on Earth. That's because in the nonphysical, nothing has any meaning. Nothing has any inherent meaning in physical reality either. However, you experience everything as if it is real. Therefore, in your physical life, everything has meaning. It is always the meaning you choose to give it.

It is your divine right to manifest anything you desire. You can be, have and do anything in this reality. All you have to do is match the vibration of whatever it is you want and you'll be guided right to it. You might have already learned that as soon as you ask for something, it is given. It exists and it's ready and waiting for you. You cannot see it yet, because you are not yet a match. But as soon as you become a match, it will appear right before your eyes.

Did you catch the trick there? The thing you want will never become a match to you. You must become a match to it. Remember, your vibration is always changing and expanding. The thing you want is not like you. Its vibration doesn't really change much, unless it's another person, of course. But typically, when you ask for things, the things have a steady vibrational frequency and you must become a match to them. Imagine the Grand Canyon. You must come to it. It's not ever coming to you. So think of the manifestation process as an activity involving change.

You generally want things that you do not have. Do you see how this might present a problem in a reality governed by attraction? If you want something, that usually means you believe you lack it. If you had it, would you really want it again? If you had a wonderful mate for instance, you would probably not want another mate (unless you enjoy drama), you would want something else that you did not already have. If you want something you do not already possess, you are emitting the vibration of lack. This is certainly not a match to what you want, because that vibration of lack is a perfect match to the lack of what you want. If you did not have the vibration of lack with regard to your desire, it would come. The manifestation of your desire is all about moving out of the vibration of lacking it to the vibration of having it.

DAY NINE - THE MANIFESTATION OF DESIRE (JOSHUA)

Why on Earth is the manifestation process designed this way? We are happy you asked. If you asked for things and received them without first becoming a vibrational match, you would never be satisfied and you would never understand what you truly wanted. You would create in fear a bit too easily and that's no fun. This process ensures that you really, really, want what it is you think you want and that you actually go through the required vibrational change necessary to become the receiver of it. Otherwise, it has no value to you and you don't actually want it.

If you really want something, you will allow yourself to be moved through experiences that cause the proper changes to occur. In the process, guess what also occurs? You elevate your perspective. We will let you in on a little secret. Instead of fixating on something you lack and then go through all of the required experiences that will alter your vibration so that you finally match whatever it is you wanted in the first place, why not just simply raise your perspective? After all, that's what's going to happen anyway.

If you lack something and think you'd feel better if you had it, you will not. That's due to the fact that outside things (everything that exists in your outer reality) cannot make you feel anything. Remember, everything that exists outside of you is simply a reflection of how you feel about yourself on the inside. If you look in the mirror and don't like your hairstyle, no amount of adjusting the mirror will ever change your hair. The mirror doesn't make you feel anything. Your opinion of what you see in your reflection is the only thing that ever makes you feel anything.

What you really want is the growth and experience gained as a result of the journey you will take from desire to manifestation. The desire is the engine of that journey. The manifestation of the desire is the destination, but it's the journey itself that is the reward. When you consider the journey in this way, you accidentally discover the key to manifesting anything, because you drop your attention to the end result. In this manner, you live in the moment and offer a highly attractive vibration that's not tied to the identity of one who lacks this thing you want.

Have you ever dreamt of something you very much wanted? Sometimes, it feels good to get it, but not for very long. Usually it doesn't feel the way you thought it would feel. Often, the amount of effort it took to get it was never really worth it in the end. But every single time you birthed a desire, you were taken on a journey of discovery. In every case, you learned something new about yourself and you shifted your perspective. In fact, the journey to the fruition of your desire is often far more entertaining than the desire itself.

DAY NINE - THE MANIFESTATION OF DESIRE (JOSHUA)

We will bring up an interesting paradox that describes the manifestation process perfectly. You could learn to become a master of manifestation. You could study vibration, become expert in the art of emotion, focus intently on what you wanted, fully accept your life as it is without it and soon you would match the vibration of anything you ever desired quite easily. It would pop right into your reality. But as a master, you would know better. You would never, ever do that, no matter how much you wanted something. As a master, you understand the true nature of this physical reality.

Why would a master creator never, ever manifest any desire? Because the master realizes that from that human perspective, you could manifest what is already known. A master allows the universe to bring forth the unknown, because this is the true path of creation. If you birth a desire, it is something you've already seen. Someone else has done something similar. There's nothing new about it. What you really want is to experience something completely new. So as a master, your only work is to raise your perspective to the highest possible level within the confines of your beliefs.

If you know what you want, you can manifest it easily as long as you move out of the vibration of lack and become a vibrational match to it. But if you know what you want, then it's probably nothing new and you'll find it dull and unfulfilling. We promise you that no amount of money, luxury, free time or fame will ever make you feel any different. You are already a master creator and that's why you're here. Creators create the new, not the stuff that's already been created by someone else. This is the true nature of the universe. It's all about the new. This is what you really want and there is a way to get it.

What you truly want is something we call...

THE UNIMAGINABLE
